Being disappointed in not receive ig paper from Baltimore, we have been obliged to issue the Gazette off a half sheet.

ONE DOMNUNICATED'S On Monday last, by the direction of the Executive Department of this State, opr Flag was hojated half mast high, and thirteen minute guns were fired in honour to the memory of Commodore O. H. Perry.

This small tribute to departed merit is hut fittly emblematic of the feelings enterpained by our Executive, in unison with those of their fellow citizens, on an event so melancholy, and much to be deplored, as the loss of the gallant Heroof Erie. Let his country, while she mourns her fate in being depriv-ed of one of her brightest sons, not forget to encourage others to emulate tits worth.

From the Baltimore Morning Chronicle. Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry. One of our naval heroes, and the first in the annals of American hisfory who gained a victory where fleet was opposed to fleet, has now paid the debt of nature. OLIVER HAZARD PERRY, is in more! There seems something do dent in a character, however illustrious, until it receives the consecration of death. However eminent a man may be for his talents or for his virtues-distinguished by his public intellect, renowned for bravery; or ed book at home and abroad well-while he lives and old it is another pull-film down from the softy ca-summ of public admiration which forms his pedental, no the numble platform on which he stands. Au-when death tobches with his wald of ebony a character aderesplendene when it is converted as by magic Bamo as she, walked the sodiec, litto dust and seles, and seems to call'd aloud, into dust and seles, and seems to implore nothing but a few feet of earth to moulder away in quietude and in silence, while the cold dewa of night hang over his head, and nothing but insensate marks the spot where he slumbers -envy shrinks with abhorrence from the sanctuary of the dead, and death canonizes and consecrates the character. It is then and then only, that the virtues begin to gleam and to twinkle with a star-like radiance, through the interposing shadows of the tomb-they then shine from their proper sphere; they are set beyond human reach in the broad expanding and overarching firmament of fame. We hope that the following slight biographic sketch of the departed hero drawn from the most authentic source, will not be deemed un interesting. Oliver Hazard Perry, was the son of Christopher Ray. mond Perry, and was born in Newport, Rhode Island, on the 23d of August, 1785. His father had borne an honourable part both by sea and land, in the revolutionary battles o his country; he was from his maternal side, descended in ta direct line from Sir William Wale, so renowned in the history of Scotland. In April 1799, he received 3 midshipman's warrant, and was at- Procession: tached to the United States ship Gen. Green, under the command of his father, until the reduction of the navy. On the breaking out of the Tripolitan war, he was ordered to join the Adams, commanded by captain Campbell, with whom he continued until commodore Preb e was superceded by commodore Morris, when he returned in the frigate New York to the United States, duing which cruise he was promoted to an acting lieutenancy. In 1804, under his old commander captain Campbell of the Contallation, he joined our squadron at Mita, where he remained until by orders of that officer he entered as first lieutenan on board of the Nautilus, to which vessel he was attached until com modore Rodgers assumed the command of the squadron. He remained in this station until the conclusion of the peace with Trip It, when the commodore shifted his flag from the Constitution to the Essex, and took Oliver Hazard Perry with him to the United States in the capacity of second lieutenant. During the embargo, he was appointed to the command of 17 gun boats then lying at Newport-and in 1810, he superceded captain Jones in the command of the United States schr. Revenge, attached to the squadron of commodore Rogers, ly ng at Naw London. This schooner was lost off_the_port_above mentioned, a court of inquiry investigated all the facts of the case, by whom the conduct of the commanding officer was highly applauded-his cool and

Here we deem it needless to pur-sue him further—with follows, is now matter of American history he stands in the full sunlight of glory-the admiration of his countrymen consti ates his best panegy ric; his bravery during that perilous engagement for the acquisition of victory, could only be rivalled by his humanity to the vanquished afterwards. This is an event that will not be forgotten; he has made the waves of that mighty lake the rolling monuments of his glory. With regard to the softer, the more delicate, the domestic affectionsthose that shun the baze of public admiration and court privacy and shade, those that may be denominated the tendrils of the numan heart, they wound the needees around all his sturdy and were independent qualities-the grandeur of the oak was enlivened and decorated by the blossoms and the fragrance of the or private services tuminout with proodbine that enfolded its trenk, hetal Bolivar had seized upon a pass and crept in spiral ringlets around for imunicating with New Grenatia, adorned by the less dazzling, but its branches. But of what avail is from which section of country he more endearing furlities of the heart; glory—the same destroying angel expected great support. From the Norfolk Herald. FROM THE MEDITERRAN AN.

From a source that may be rel on we have received the follow statement of facts relative to late unhappy misunderstanding mong the principal officers of Mediterranean squadron: "By virtue of a warrant issued commodore Stewart, Comman in Chief, &c. a Court Martial, co posed of the following officers, Capt. McDonough, President,

Benj. F. Bourne, Judge Advocat convened on board the frigate Gu riere on the - day of the trial of _____, a marine cha ed with having stabbed a man longing to the Franklin.

The Court, pursuant to ord continued its proceedings on bo the Guerriere, until the evide was closed and sentence pass when it adjourned to meet on sh at Naples, the next day, in co quence of the indisposition of Judge Advocate, where having vised and signed the record, Court then adjourned, "withou day."

"The proceedings and sente being sent to the Commander Chief for his approbation, (as law requires) were by him decla illegal and of no effect-first, cause the Court had been held shore, in disocedience of his requiring it to be held on board Guerriere; and secondly, that it been held where the United S. had no jurisdiction-conseque having no jurisdiction there the offence charged against the soner, he was ordered to be charged from arrest, and the ceedings against him annulled.

"The Commander in Chiefre ed the Court by signal to rec this communication, to which way of remark he added, that tisfied these irregularities on part of the Court had proce rom inadvertence, he should further notice them at that time trusted that in any future proc ings they would be more obser of the laws and regulations pro ed in such cases, that culprits serving punishment should not cape to the prejudice of the
